NEW METHOD OF STUDYING THE PIANOFORTE.

The celebrated musicians, Czerny, Franch, Wolf, and others, made use of various mechanical means to obtain the equalité d'exécution so remarkable in their performance on the Pianoforte; but none of them thought fit to divulge the method which they employed.

The Chapman of Mr. Tylou, and the Gaule Marie of M. Kalkbrenner, serve merely to indicate the position of the hand and fingers, and do not provide for giving uniform strength and agility to the fingers has been hitherto made known. The manufacturers realize themselves that the Dactylion supply this deficiency.

It is only after having verified the real value of this instrument, by using it during several months, that the Inventor has been induced to make it public, in order that his countrymen in general may enjoy the advantages presented by this Dactylion. The instrument is so constructed, that, by placing the fingers on the keys suspended over the keys, and pressing them down, the fingers are raised, so that the performer cannot possibly contract bad habits in this respect. The force (the degree of which may be increased or diminished at pleasure) is given to the finger by the action of the spring, which restores the finger to its ordinary position.

THE DACTYLION.

An instrument calculated to give strength and flexibility to the fingers, to render them independent of each other, and to give them the equality of touch so essential to correct and brilliant execution on the Pianoforte will prove that a single hour of study daily with the Dactylion is sufficient to enable pupils to make rapid progress, and to maintain the equality of execution.

With the view of rendering this invention as useful as possible, M. 1 composed a collection of Exercises, one thousand in number, containing all the exercises necessary to obtain the equality of touch.

It is only necessary to add, that the Dactylion has received the support of the most distinguished Artists, and is already introduced into the Prussian Academy under the sanction of the government.

At the request of the Minister of the Interior, the Musical Section of the Academy of Fine Arts has examined the construction of the Dactylion, by M. Henri Herz, and M. Heron, reported on the same, read at the Academy, December 26, 1835, a report, in which the members of this Commission, viz. the Barons de Breteuil, de Serres, de Serres, de Serres, and de Serres, declared in favor of the Dactylion, a musical machine which the Academy has given its approbation to the execution of the
